APIs Apps Data Incubation

Content

- Data: datasets of our best openly licensed data-sets
- Apps: showcase innovative reuse cases

Services

- APIs: access Europeana content via four APIs
- Incubation: financial support through match funding, and the Europeana Challenges.

CC BY-SA

Europeana APIs

Four APIs are available, all free to access after a simple registration process.

- ➔ The REST API is the most frequently used API. It enables users to filter records by a variety of data fields, from date and creator, to media type and size.
- ➔ The Europeana Linked Open Data service allows users to explore, access, and download metadata through our SPARQL endpoint.
- ➔ The Europeana OAI-PMH service supports users to harvest the entirety, or a selection of all Europeana metadata.
- ➔ The Europeana Annotations API allows users to generate, update, and retrieve annotations for objects in our collections.

Europeana Research

The key value proposition for Europeana Research is to connect quality data available from the cultural heritage sector with the digital humanities.

Recognising the importance and value of cultural heritage data for research we aim to:

- Bring DH researchers to Europeana
- Bring Europeana to DH researchers
- Build a community
- Improve access to cultural heritage for research

Europeana Research continues to expand, providing the best quality datasets from Europeana partners to researchers. These datasets are chosen for their value to researchers in terms of depth, subject matter, and having licenses that make them usable in research. Recently five datasets were added to the Europeana Research collection, four digital collections from European libraries and The European Library Open Dataset.

Croatian Web Archive. The Croatian Web Archive is a collection of selected web resources, stored on the National and University Library server.

The National and University Library in Zagreb (NUL) started cataloging web resources as early as 1998.The objective is to collect and permanently preserve web resources as part of the Croatian cultural heritage. Resources are selected for archiving according to the criteria set by the National and University Library in Zagreb. The collected resources complement the national collection with content of scientific or cultural significance.

Digital born content is collected with particular care, as it documents the everyday resources like social trends, popular events, and imp competitions, political, cultural and other types of events.The arch nt of selective capturing of web resources. Each resourc and is retrievable in the online catalogue. The Cro with the library information system and has run

Europeana Research Grants Programme

One of the key activities of the Europeana Research team was a grants programme for early career scholars. The programme was launched in September 2016. We were looking for individual research projects which make use of Europeana Collections for research purposes: employing state of the art tools and methods in the Digital Humanities to address a specific research question.

Meet our Grants Winners

Three projects have been awarded a Europeana Research Grant:

'With the generous funding that the Europeana research grant has provided, I have been able to undertake a project which aims to change the way people understand poetry. More importantly,I hope to make some contribution to promoting public engagement with archival materials - in this case the Europeana Sounds archives. I am sure that, discovering a small corner of the Europeana Collection can lead to bigger things, so the first task is to hook people in. '
